

Something seems eerily familiar about all this

Remember to define memory: _____

What were the humanoids able to do who had previously seen the disconnected lines in the comic on 318? _____. What do you think it is? _____.

How many single digits could you or I 'parrot back' upon hearing them _____

After seeing 2,500 pictures, what is the average human accuracy in recalling them? _____

Trace the three stages of memorization:

Encoding: _____ Storage: _____ Retrieval: _____

Provide examples of the following: Sensory memory: _____

Short-term memory: _____ Long-term memory: _____

(and don't forget) Working memory: _____

What does Myers mean by the phrase "sometimes Google replaces rehearsal?"

Your brain does _____ processing while a computer does _____

Give examples of the following, which we automatically process:

Space _____ Time _____ Frequency _____

What's an example of something you'd store in echoic memory? _____ Iconic? _____

FYI 322: the 7 magic 7s! What is psych's contribution? _____

Give an example of something you've rehearsed recently _____

What have you chunked recently to remember? _____

Take a moment to recall a mnemonic device not in the chapter. What is it:

How is Wikipedia a good example of hierarchies in action?

Concerning rehearsal, is it better to study a) all at once or b) in spaced out periods of time?

We have tests once a week instead of once every two weeks. Why is that good for memory?

If you rehearse the names of people new to you, the serial position effect says you will remember the (circle one): earlier middle later names more easily.